

Assumption:

I think the document of business rules should give designer more details like the precision of numeric values, which is can help makers design more perfect program. Otherwise designer just can set a wide scope to ensure the values can be applied. And the person whoever carried out the procedure should be recorded because it is more reasonable in the real life. Another thing should be considered is the charge sheet need an element named "total charge" to give customer a value included all of fees. Because in general customer do not want to calculate the result by themselves.
